

PIEDMONT SURGICAL CLINIC
THE EXPERTISE YOU WANT FOR HERNIA REPAIR

If your doctor has diagnosed you with a hernia, a surgical consultation may be recommended. Hernia repair can often be done at your convenience on an outpatient basis.

Hernias occur when soft tissue bulges through a weak area or a hole in the abdominal muscles. They are one of the most common health problems that general surgeons treat. If you need hernia repair, you're in excellent hands at Piedmont Surgical Clinic.

The best options in hernia surgery.

Our surgeons have years of experience treating all types of hernias. They stay current on their training to be sure they're offering the most up-to-date care available.

Piedmont Surgical Clinic is the only surgical group in Concord performing minimally invasive repair of inguinal (groin) hernias. This type of surgery is performed with tiny instruments through a few small incisions instead of a single long incision needed for the older "open" type of operation. Smaller incisions generally mean a faster recovery, reduced postoperative pain and a quicker return to your normal activities.

For patients with large or complex abdominal hernias, our doctors offer special expertise with an operation called "component release". This type of surgery is still considered relatively new in the medical community, but our surgeons have been performing it for several years. They perform this particular operation more than any other local surgeon. This procedure is being shown to achieve excellent long-term outcomes for those with large, recurring or otherwise complicated hernias.

Personal care, right from the start.

During your consultation, you'll learn about your options for hernia repair and get answers to all your questions. Your surgeon will tailor your treatment to meet your unique needs and be here for you from your first consultation, through surgery and your recovery.
